Constitutional Consequences of Cutting Court Budgets...............................3
by James L. Kaller, Esq.

In the face of budget cuts at all levels of federal and state governments, the right to one’s “day in court” is seriously threatened as the government closes courthouses and courtrooms and raises court fees. Kaller discusses how to reverse this trend.

NCCLP’s Fifth Annual Evening of Appreciation.........14

On May 23, NCCLP and the Smithsonian Museum of the American Indian hosted NCCLP Board of Directors member James W. Zion, Esq., and Shirley Hill Witt, Ph.D., Akwesasne Mohawk, and a founding member of the National Indian Youth Council, for a discussion on the rights of indigenous peoples to water.

After 50 Years, What Gideon Means to Local Practitioners.........................21
by Thomas F. Liotti, Esq.
On the 50th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Gideon v. Wainwright, the author, a nationally recognized criminal trial lawyer and a local village justice, describes the role he played in extending Gideon’s reach, ensuring the appointment of counsel for indigent criminal defendants to misdemeanor cases.

In Memoriam: Scott Evans Turner.........................28

A longtime member of National Coalition of Concerned Legal Professionals Board of Directors, Scott Turner was a down-to-earth, compassionate attorney, committed to finding legal recourse for working people facing the burdens of decreasing wages and benefits and increasing debt in an era of “downsizing.”

A Sentence for Structuring.................................31
by Stephen R. LaCheen, Esq.

When a rabbi asks one of America’s top criminal defense lawyers to gain a reduction in a defendant’s sentence, he finds “winning” and “losing” is not always as clear.
