Recent Decisions
IRB-Brasil Resseguros, S.A. v. Inepar Investments, S.A. ................................................ 93
The New York Court of Appeals held that parties are not required to expressly exclude New York conflict-of-laws principles in their choice-of-law provisions in order to avail themselves of New York substantive law.

Konowaloff v. Metropolitan Museum of Art .................................................. 99
The Second Circuit held that the act-of-state doctrine barred plaintiff-appellant’s claim because the Soviet government, which had appropriated his great-grandfather’s painting in 1918, was later recognized by the United States.

Licci v. Lebanese Canadian Bank ................................................................. 105
In response to certified questions from the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, the New York State Court of Appeals held that New York’s long-arm statute confers jurisdiction over a foreign bank when the bank has transacted business within the state and availed itself of the benefits and protections of the state.

United States v. Bellaizac-Hurtado .................................................. 111
The Eleventh Circuit held that customary international law limits Congress’s constitutional authority under the Offences Clause to define “Offences against the Law of Nations,” and that the prosecution of drug trafficking in international waters under the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act was unconstitutional.

Lozano v. Alvarez ................................................................. 117
The United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit held that the one-year period associated with the “now settled” defense under the Hague Convention on Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction and the International Child Abduction Remedies Act is not subject to equitable tolling, and that a child’s lack of legal immigration status does not bar application of the “now settled” defense.
