Recent Decisions
L.A.B. v. B.M.
The New York Supreme Court, Westchester County, held that the divorce action, to which a Nicaraguan citizen was a party, should be transferred to Nicaragua, finding that the significance of judicial economy outweighed the defendant’s connections to New York, and therefore declined to exercise jurisdiction in the pending action.

City of Pontiac Policemen’s and Firemen’s Retirement System v. UBS AG
As a matter of first impression, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit affirmed that the Securities Exchange Act precludes claims by investors in a foreign issuer on a foreign exchange, even when the shares were cross-listed on a United States exchange. Also, the mere placement of a buy order for foreign securities that is then executed outside the United States does not warrant an individual to bring a cause of action under the Securities Exchange Act.

Transaero, Inc. v. Graham Chappell and International Aviation Services Pty Ltd.
The United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York held that the plaintiff New York company had established a prima facie case for long-arm jurisdiction pursuant to NY CPLR 302, by alleging that the defendant former employee had earned his living by working for a New York-based company and conducted his daily business activities through New York.

Republic of Argentina v. NML Capital Ltd.
The United States Supreme Court held that the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 does not preclude discovery of Argentina’s extraterritorial assets, as long as the discovery is reasonably likely to lead to attachable property.

Participatory Defense — Transforming the Courts Through Family and Community Organizing ........ 3
by Raj Jayadev

In this issue, Verdict examines alternative approaches to representation for low-income clients. We begin with an article about a program piloted out of San Jose, California, where a community-based organization designed an approach to bringing together the families and communities of young people charged with crimes, partnering with the public defenders’ office to bring the community into the courtrooms and build a self help approach to fighting for the young person. This method has achieved a surprising increase in acquittals and reduced sentences for juvenile defendants. In San Jose alone over a six-year period this has saved 1,600 years in dismissed cases or reduced sentences.

The Promise and Potential Pitfalls of Limited Scope Representation and Unbundled Legal Services ........ 9
by Philip M. Genty, Esq.

Columbia University Law School professor Philip Genty reviews approaches to limited scope representation or “unbundled” legal services that offer significant potential for lowering the cost of legal services and making legal resources available to people who would otherwise not have access to them, including CCLP’s pro bono legal advice and advocacy method. Genty analyzes both how various approaches to limited legal assistance can help, as well as the factors counsel must consider.

Civil Gideon Would Not Solve the Need for Poor People’s Legal Representation ................. 31
by Jonathan A. Weiss, Esq.

The author describes why simply extending to civil cases the Gideon v. Wainwright (372 U.S. 335) provision of counsel for the trial of those accused of a crime would not solve the problem of lack of representation for a growing portion of the US population. Weiss, a legend in the field of providing civil representation for indigent clients, calls instead for adequate funding for the real provision of lawyers for the poor, working with and for them.
