

HONORING

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

A CONVERSATION TO

CONSIDER THE LEGACY OF ARCHBISHOP EMERITUS DESMOND TUTU

In recognition of Black History Month, the Racial Justice Project and the South Africa Reading Group at New York Law School will host a panel to consider the legacy of Archbishop Emeritus Desmond Tutu, both within South Africa and around the globe. The conversation will be moderated by Professor Penelope Andrews, Director of the Racial Justice Project, and Stephanie Urdang, author of several books including Fighting Two Colonialisms: Women in Guinea-Bissau and Mapping My Way Home.

The panel will feature Dr. Pippa Green, Managing Editor, Econ 3X3 and former Press Ombudsman, South Africa; Dr. Robert Jones, Chancellor, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign; and Charlotte McClain-Nhlapo, Global Disability Advisor, The World Bank.

DateTuesday, February 15, 2022*Time*12:50 p.m.*Location*Webinar

Information on how to access the webinar will be provided via email closer to the webinar date.

For more information and to RSVP, please visit www.nyls.edu/RJPEvent

The Racial Justice Project is housed within the Wilf Impact Center for Public Interest Law.

