

WE ARE NEW YORK'S LAW SCHOOL

Adjunct Faculty: Art Law

New York Law School seeks adjunct faculty to teach Art Law, an upper-level elective course taught on campus in either the fall or spring semester of Academic Year 2023–24.

Course Description

Art Law is a survey course on the law and business of art. In-class simulations include negotiations of the following: an artist-dealer representation agreement; an art consignment agreement with an auction house; a commission agreement between an artist and collector; a loan agreement with a museum. Other topics for discussion include the international transport of art and the conflicting values of free trade and repatriation, the efficacy of the Visual Artists Rights Act in according moral rights to artists, and the tensions between the restitution of Holocaust-looted art and the merits of the good-faith purchaser. Other topics explored from the perspective of the artist include First Amendment rights, copyright, and resale rights. Also touched on are tax and estate planning for collectors and artists, including the tax and estate planning aspects of charitable contributions, and the art collection as investment property.

This is a two-credit course and the estimated hours for this position will be nine hours per week. In addition to class meetings, the adjunct professor should expect to meet with students for an additional one to two hours per week to answer questions on the course materials and prepare for exams.

Requirements

- J.D. from an American Bar Association-accredited law school.
- A minimum of five years of relevant practice experience.
- Teaching and supervisory experience are preferred.

Compensation

Salary is $4,000.

How to Apply

Please submit the following to teaching@nyls.edu:

- Statement of interest
- Résumé or CV
- Writing sample

Please use the subject line "Art Law." Candidates are encouraged to apply by November 30, 2022.

About New York Law School

Founded in 1891, New York Law School (NYLS) is an independent law school located in Tribeca, the heart of New York City's legal, government, financial, and emerging tech centers. Known as "New York's law school," NYLS embraces the city as its classroom by complementing a rigorous legal education with an innovative and diverse set of "uniquely New York" experiential learning opportunities. Since opening its doors, NYLS has produced graduates who have gone on to hold high elected and appointed office in the city, lead large and small firms, and gain broad recognition as captains of business and industry. Its renowned faculty of prolific scholars has built the School's strength in key areas of the law, including business and financial services, intellectual property and privacy, and government and public interest law. NYLS has more than 18,000 graduates and currently enrolls around 1,100 students in its full-time and part-time J.D. programs. The School also offers an advanced-degree program in Tax Law.

New York Law School is an Equal Opportunity Employer

All qualified candidates will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, national or ethnic origin, age, disability, or veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law.